

ABSTRACT

A system and method for promotion and sale of products within computer games or simulations wherein at least one promoted product is brought to the attention of a player. Upon performing at least one action, the player may select a promoted product, receive information about the promoted product, achieve enhanced performance during game play, and/or purchase the promoted product. The various embodiments illustrate the promoted product may be anything from goods and services to contracts to interests in real property.